CORONAVIRUS: GUIDANCE FOR SPORT AND LEISURE FACILITIES

Sportscotland, the national agency for sport in Scotland, recently released new guidance for sports facilities, to help them reopen and continue operating safely during the coronavirus pandemic.

The guidance is intended for the owners and operators of sports facilities, yet, it can be adapted to cater other sports, clubs and community programmes. It is also applies to indoor and outdoor sports and can be either used in whole or in part depending on individual circumstances.

The guidance is features a checklist of actions and points to consider:

- things to consider as you prepare to reopen, including responsibilities of management
- how to prepare your facility for sport or activity

Topics covered include:

- facility essentials
- physical distancing
- hygiene, health and safety
- training and communications

Who is this guidance for?

Owners and operators of sports facilities in Scotland, as well as other sports, clubs and community organisations.

Important information

Gyms and sports facilities are currently permitted to open under Scottish Government guidelines. This will be reviewed on an ongoing basis, so always check guidance for your local area for the latest restrictions.
